The author was a collector of Jungleterry districts in 1773, and a Resident at Delhi, 1782. He was “sent by the Council on an Embassy to Shah Alam at Delhi to negotiate with him for assistance against the Sikhs.” His account of the Sikhs was written for Lord Hastings, the G.G. of India. His account of the Gurus is mostly incorrect, but the account of the contemporary events is very informative, particularly of the incursions of the Sikhs in the Jamuna—Ganges doab and their transactions and treaty with the Mahrattas in 1785.

Crauford, Q. Sketches, chiefly relating to the History, Religion. Learning and manners of the Hindoos with a concise account of the present state of native powers of Hindostan. T. Cadel, London, 1790.

The account of the Sikhs; pp. 350-370, is based upon the information supplied by Col. Polier and Mr. Stuart. Leaving aside the account of the Gurus, which is mostly incorrect, the Impression about the religion, manners and general life of the Sikhs of those days, based as they are on personal observation, are of great historical value; so is the account of their struggles with Ahmad Shah and his son Talmur.

Talmur and the Sikhs, 350; Ahmad Shah and the Sikhs (at Kup Rahlra), 356; Abdali defeated at Amritsar, 357; the present condition of the Sikhs, their customs and manners, 365-70; their conquests, 356-70.

The author has expressed his impressions on the subject based on his personal observations in the country during May-November. 1922, though he is not altogether un-influenced by the British official view. His chapters on Amritsar, the Sikhs, Guru ka Bagh, the Mohammedans and the Sikhs and the Punjab throw a flood of light on the Akali movement. His impression based on the information through interested persons that the Sikhs had an underlying object of establishing a Sikh Raj in the Punjab is entirely unfounded. The Akali movement was purely a religious movement though an attempt had been made to exploit it for political purposes.

Dr. Honighberger was a court physician and an ordnance officer in charge of Gun—powder manufactory at Lahore. Although he is, to a great extent, influenced by the rumours spread by the Dogras about the sons and Ranis of the Great Maharaja, because of his association with the Jammu family, his narrative throws a flood of light on the last days of Maharaja Ranjit Singh, murders of Kharak Singh, Naunihal Singh, Chand Kaur, and Maharaja Sher Singh, and the intrigues of Dogra trio for the subversion of the Sikh Empire. Dr. Honighberger closes his account with the first Anglo-Sikh War and the appointment of a resident at the Sikhs capital for the administration of the Punjab during the minority of Maharaja Dalip Singh.

Colonel Gardner, the famous 'Gardauna Sahib' of the Sikh army, who was closely connected with the events he has described, has divulged the secret designs and machinations of the Jammu Dogra trio for the subservision of the Sikh empire with the object of eventual succession of Hira Singh, son of Wazir Dhyan Singh, to the throne of Maharaja Ranjit Singh. It was with this object in view that all the murders following the death of the 'Lion of the Punjab' were brought about directly or indirectly by the Dogra brothers, Dhyan Singh, Gulab Singh and Suchet Singh.

It is an exposition of the Annexation of the Punjab in 1849 when, "though" in the words of John Sullivan, "the State of Lahore had remained faithful to its engagements with the British Government, that Government had violated its engagements with the Lahore State; firstly, in having failed to maintain that government in a council of Regency; secondly, in having refused to make that simple demonstra-tion of British troops which would have crushed Mulraj's rebellion in the bud: and thirdly, by the confiscation of the territory and property, its ward in violation of, of that pledge of perpetual peace and friendship between the British Government and the Maharaja Dhuleep Singh, his heirs and successors," which it had given by the treaty of March, 1846. p. 66.

Nur Muhammad, Qazi, bin Qazi Abdulla of Gunjaba. Jang Namah.

MS. i 178 A.H.. 1764-65 A.D.

the copy In the Gazetteer Office Quetta, from which the late Sardar Karam Singh made his copy in 1906, was written by Khair Muhammad of Gunjaba and is dated 27th Sha'ban, 1229 A.H..1814 A.D. KCA ; VSA; GS.

A detailed account of the seventh invasion of Ahmad Shah, with the desecration of the holy Sikh temple, Darbar Sahib, of Amritsar, the battles with the Sikhs and notices of the various Sikh sardars and the territories occupied by them.

The account of the bravery, the moral character and the military tactics of the Sikhs, as given in chapter XLI, is highly creditable to the Sikhs of those days.

Qazi Nur Muhammad, the author, having accompanied the Beluchi division of the expeditionary forces of Ahmad Shah Abdali during this invasion, was present in the army throughout the conflicts and was an eye-witness of the events and other things recorded by him. His account, therefore is a very important historical evidence.

This work has been edited and translated into English by Ganda Singh and published by the Khalsa College, Amritsar. 1939.

A general history of India from the Arab conquest to 1149 A.H., 1736-37.

The author was an eye—witness of the siege and surrender of Gurdaspur, and of the capture of Banda and his Sikh companions.

Fifth Chapter (ASB copy) is devoted to the account of the rise of the Sikhs.

Yar Muhammad. Dastur-ul-Insha, also called Insha-i-Qalandar, MS. 1122 A.H; ILC, 183, MB. 84.7 (Ptd., Calcutta, 1253 A.H.. 1837 A.D.); OPB, 883/842 KCA. 507.

Letters of Yar Muhammad Khan Qalandar.

The author was present on the occasion of the insurrection of the Mullas, a few days before the death of Bahadur Shah (Hadiqat-ul-Aqalim, 129/15), and was an eye-witness of the struggle between the sons of Bahadur Shah (ibid 130/24) and, later, of the exploits of Banda and his Sikh companions in the province of Sirhind. Yar Muhammad has recorded that, after the conquest of Sirhind, some Muhammadans of Sirhind and its neighbourhood had embraced Sikhism. Mir Nasir-ud-Din, the royal news-writer of Sirhind, had been converted into Nasir Singh and Dindar Khan (of whom Muhammad Qasim has written as Dindar Khan the apostate son of Jalal Khan Rohila) into Djindar Singh.

Story of the ten Sikh Gurus.

Dayal Singh. Fateh Nama. M.S., GS.

An account of the battle fought by the Sikhs against Ahmad Khan Shahanchi.

Dhian Singh. Dasam Padshah Antam Kautak. MS., GS.

An account of the last days of Guru Govind Singh.

It is an account of the death of Guru Govind Singh at Nanded (Hyderabad, Deccan)-the only work which gives the name of the surgeon who was sent by Emperor Bahadur Shah to attend the Guru after he was wounded by a Pathan of Sirhind and to stitch his wounds. The author says that his name was Call, Caule, or Cole, and that he was an Angrez, an Englishman.

In the conclusion, there is a note on Suchet Singh and Bhai Bir Singh of Naurangabad.

..... Janam Sakhi Sri Guru Nanak Sahib. Khalsa College Council, Amritsar.

..... Guru Arjan Charitra. Khalsa Press, Lahore, 430 Nanakshahi.

.....Durga Parbodh. Balmukand Press, Lahore.

The author bases the treatment of his subject on Gur Bilas of Sukha Singh and of. Sumer Singh, Suraj Parkash, Panth Parkash, Tawarikh Guru Khalsa, Dabistan-i-Mazahib, Tawarikh-i-Punjab of Bute Shah, the compositions of Bhai Gurdas and the Adi and Dasam Granths, and proves that there is no place for idol-worship in Sikhism and that allegation of Durga worship against Guru Gobind Singh is unfounded.

H

Haqiqat Raja Shivnabh Ki. MS., BM. Or. 1125.

An account of Raja Shivnabh of Ceylone.

“The Hakikat has reference to Shivnabh, King of Ceylon, and to former rulers from the time of Mayadune. It describes Ceylon as being three days’ journey from Nagapatam, the sea-port town of Tanjore, and shortly notices the establishment of Sikh and Bhatriya communities In that island, with reference to some of its rulers.”

The Haqiqat, together with three additional hymns ascribed to Guru Nanak is placed between the Mundavani and the Ragmala (fol. 692a-695a) in the copy of the Adi Grantha, found by Henry Erskine in one of the tents on the battle-field of Gujerat, 1849, and, now preserved in the British Museum; under PanJabi Mss. Or. 1125.

It is interesting to record here the following note that appears at the end of the volume.

“After the Infantry charging the Enemy at Goojert, the Cavalry and Light Artillery pursued the fugitive Sikhs and Afghans. The Infantry then advanced steadily in line until clear of the blazing Camp when they filled arms. It was there I found this book in a tent of one of the hostile, chiefs-probably Sher Singh. It is highly prized by the, Sikhs, and I have had many solicitations from Sikh gentlemen. Lahore, 1849 Apri I. Henry Erskine,

PREFACE

This Select Bibliography of the Sikhs and Sikhism has grown out of a small list of books I had drawn up for my private use in 1919 at Peshawar where I was then posted with the 1st Brigade. With my transfer to Mesopotamia in 1920, my interest in the collection of books on the military history of the Sikhs grew and I was able to collect a fairly large number of them during my nine years' sojourn (1921-1930) in Persia. With this came the idea of preparing a regular bibliography on the subject and I published a selection from it in the Sikh Itihas Number of the Phulwari (December, 1929—January, 1930), edited by the late Sardar Karam Singh. But the Bibliography assumed its present form at the Khalsa College, Amritsar, where I was in charge of the Sikh History Research Department from 1931 to 1949. A large number of entries were made from October 1949 to 1956 at Patiala, where, in 1954, I published A Bibliography of the Patiala and the East Punjab States Union on behalf of the PEPSU Archives.

The object of the Bibliography is to put together in one handy volume for use of students and scholars of history all the necessary information about the material on the history of the Sikhs and Sikhism available in Indian and foreign languages lying scattered in rare and out-of-print books and in scarce manuscripts in Persian and Punjabi available in far-flung libraries in India and abroad.

The books and manuscripts included in this Bibliography have been arranged authorwise under different languages, giving not only the titles of the books, but also the names of their publishers and the places and the dates of their publication. About the manuscripts the information is a little more detailed. It gives the names of libraries and institutions in India and abroad, where they are preserved and also their section and accession numbers under which they may be located for consultation. Where the titles of books and manuscripts are not indicative enough of their contents, an effort has been made to give some guiding hints about the relevant topics together with the pages on which they may be found.

I am thankful to Prof. Satbir Singh, M.A., who has persistently followed up the suggestion for the publication of this Bibliography of the Sikhs and Sikhism by the Sikh Itihas Research Board of the Shiromani Gurdwara Parbandhak Committee, Amritsar. But for his and Master Sujjan Singh's keen interest in it, it would not have, perhaps, been published for a long time to come.

In the absence of diacritical marks available with the printers and their omission to insert the names of non-English books and manuscripts in their respective scripts in the space provided for the purpose, there might be difficulty in correctly deciphering some of the names. In such cases reference may be made to A Bibliography of the Punjab published by the Punjabi University, Patiala. That work is more comprehensive and detailed than this.

For reasons beyond the control of the compiler, who had no hand in reading the proofs, or, otherwise, in the production of the book, a large number of mistakes, some of them inexcusable, have crept into it at the printing stage. For them he offers an apology on behalf of the publishers and craves the indulgence of the reader.
